

Unveiling Of The First Ever Yorkshire Boundary Sign

Speech by Andy Strangeway

Yorkshire Day on 1st August 2014 will go down in history as the day Yorkshire erected its first ever boundary sign.

Finally, after over 1,100 years in the waiting, we welcome visitors to our great county in the same manner that all other counties have done for decades.

With a boundary of 600 miles we should have the most boundary signs, not the least. I hope this sign will be the first of many.

I would like to thank kind donors, Doncaster Council and Philip Tibbetts, who designed the sign, for their support.

I dedicate this first Yorkshire Boundary sign to HM Queen, Yorkshire, the Three Ridings, the City of York and all Yorkshire folk.
